

Capstone Project Proposal

What is your topic? Technology and digital spaces

- It is hard to stay present in the moment as we get older, and modern life relies heavily on phones, productivity, and pulls us out of the present
- Digital spaces are being taken over by AI/AI-generated content - this will be a human space
- Idea: Digital time capsule where users can write a letter or message to their future self and it gets locked until a date in the future that they can choose

Identify lenses we have discussed in class that your topic may rely on most:

- Challenging mental models: this project will challenge the idea and mindset that you must be productive, and that we must stay busy
- Data visualization?

What are some of the features you imagine your project/product would include?

- A form kind of writing space where the user can answer questions or prompts that help them imagine the future that they want
- The user can choose when they want to open the letter, but until that date, the page is locked or cannot be viewed
- Space to enter photos or other visual information
- Maybe data visualization of how where people usually spend most of their time and attention

Are there possible tangents, challenges, concerns, or vague ideas related to your ideas? (It could go this direction... I am not sure about X, and I don't know how I might deal with Y).

- I want this to be impactful to the user so I want to add some data visualization before the user directly goes into creating a time capsule for themselves: maybe I can add information about why I am creating a time capsule through showing how difficult it is for people to be present and how much content we consume?
- Can feel exclusive to people who can afford to be present

Who is your target audience?

- Broad - people who are entering new stages of their lives
- Middle - college students, graduates, people who are experiencing leaving a more structured school environment, into adult life
- Specific - a design student in their 20s who consumes a lot of digital media and wants to succeed but feels like they can't be present in their life
